1. Aleister Crowley Past Life
2. Ceres, A Planet of the Jupiter System

Greetings! A difficult time between now and the last ATA issue has transpired. Let's look at the initial reading of the most recent past life of Aleister Crowley's. (NOTE: Past life readings are generally in bad taste and are never going to become a focus, let this and a few others be the exceptions to the rule.) This reading was done approximately in 2014 and was never revisited.

A heavy feeling came on with this one. Disclaimer: most past life readings are inaccurate, due to incorrect theoretical applications, once again, forgive this venture. Aleister Crowley was a French Royalty with a long name. He was associated with Philip V of France. This is around 1300. This is about an average time frame for normal reincarnations, maybe a little less, but that's ok.

He was a Count, a Black Magician, a Solomonist. He was no peasant, that is for sure. The House of Valois, possibly Philip VI were his associates. The reason the reading gave Philip V also is because of my method. More on that some other time. I like some things about Crowley and although I don't follow him, as always trying to be unbiased in everything. He was known as "The Prince" and someone very into magic. He was tyrannical, sadistic, only forgiving if one were to pay him. I'm not sure of the actual name and maybe that would have to take a further amount of research outside of the internet. To me personally, it does not matter much. I have gathered that he was an associated personality ranging from Philip IV to Charles V, etc. It was evident however there was a strain of black in this era and as I have previously stated, the undecipherable and misleading VOYNICH (Necronomicon) "may it never be solved" was authored by this era Nobility of the French who may or may not have been directly in association with the Personality that was Crowley prior to his lifetime that we have held so dreadful and at times so dear...but if he was not right there, he was very near in timeline. The exact details are not so important, but it is related. (ATA 18)

In summary, Crowley was someone known as "The Prince." Maybe he was Gilles de Rais but I don't think so. Someone with more historical background in this era of House of Valois and secretive practices may have a better idea who "The Prince" so fondly was referring to...in other words, he gained that title out of infamy and fear, which ever nobleman he was in that incarnation. I did not continue to search for the actual name of man since it is not of much use to me and the amount that I did uncover was plenty, although be reminded that a practicing black magician may not have ever come out publicly in those times. The unforgettable impression that I got out of this, is that Crowley became a better person and used the elementals from this black magician to gain powers and occult influence over our world, although in his most recent lifetime, he was less of a black magician than he was in France in those days. Hopefully in his future lives he will continue toward utilizing his skills for bettering the world in occult knowledge, light and truth.

Ceres was recently photographed by the space program. It has mysterious lights on its surface within or near a crater. This planet is part of the Jupiterian system of life producing spheres also known as a chain. Theosophy is not understood much, most think it is just another religion, etc., but not even the more occultic new-age beliefs have much in the way of actual Theosophy, in fact, maybe Theosophy as it is now does not know much about the Ageless Theosophy that has no beginning or end. This may be a grand generalization and unnecessary, but it grinds in the back of my mind and irks my sensibilities that so many people cannot understand or fathom the Mystery of Life on Ceres as we have witnessed it (partially).

If people do not understand that Ceres is a life-bearing sphere and chain of spheres attached to the Jupiterian system of life bearing Planets in our Solar System, then they may find the mundane explanation for the lights sufficient. This explanation would be something akin to “gaseous emissions on the surface” or “moisture” etc. Everyone in their deepest psyches must also subconsciously know that these statements are not the truth.

A.P. Sinnett in his book, Super-Physical Science, mentions the probable existence of a life-bearing Planet within the asteroid belt connected to the Jupiterian system. To find out more about Planetary Chains, consult with the texts of old Theosophy such as The Secret Doctrine. A lot of misunderstandings are surrounding this text and actual Theosophy vs. whatever masses of people have interpreted it to be, thus, Ceres is a living Planet, as is ours, Earth. Consider that the glowing lights are an actual civilization, not imaginary or dreamed of, but actual. They actually exist and we can see them. We do not see them as we would like to see them, just like we appear to each other within the Planetary Sphere that we exist, so we dismiss it as some form of material or chemical reaction rather than seeking for enlightening understanding of the unending forms of life all around us, in the invisible spheres above and below and within.

The mainstream science and mainstream occult/new age has not gotten too much out of the true Theosophy that explains higher dimensions, or more refined, forms of living existences all around us and especially on other worlds far different in their density. To put things in perspective, Pluto is not an actual life-bearing chain, and is more like rubbish on the outer parameters of our Solar System. This also explains why the most-problematic Nibiru is partially visible, since there are realms in our actual universe so invisible to us, so unknown to the mainstream, yet known about from time immemorial by sages, wise men and theosophists (synonyms for the same thing).

To my frustration, as many months went by, I could not express my desire to share the truth about Ceres and its lights. It is phenomenal and absolutely beautiful that a civilization prospers there. It is like explaining fairy tales to children, hoping they will believe, although the myth of a fairy tale is also beyond comprehension since it is an allegory to the wise ones, yet hidden away. The same for understanding outer space and its incomprehensible reality.
